The government on Thursday pegged wheat output at a record 122 million tonnes for the 2023-24 crop year, an increase of 21 per cent over the estimates for the year-ago period.

The government has set a record target on the back of a 3.2 per cent decline in the area planted to wheat, according to Nayar.

"It's an understanding arrived at with the West Bengal Government," said an official of the West Bengal Agriculture department.

On the overall food grains, the agriculture minister said that the country was looking at an output of 291 million tonnes, which is 17 million tonnes higher than the projection for the year-ago period.

Kheri Lok Sabha seat is known as the most contested seat in Uttar Pradesh's Lakhimpur Kheri. This seat is famous for being the site of violent protests by farmers against the Centre's farm laws in 2020.

The seat is significant for several reasons:
- Political Importance: It is considered a crucial seat for the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) to maintain its majority in the Lok Sabha.
- Voter Base: Known for its diverse electorate, it has witnessed high voter turnout.
- Economic Challenges: The area faces issues such as unemployment, inflation, and limited access to basic amenities.

Historically, the seat has been held by different parties, including the Congress and the Samajwadi Party, but in 2019, the BJP's Ajay Mishra won the seat.

The current situation:
- Political Competition: The primary candidates are from the BJP and the Samajwadi Party (SP).
- Economic Conditions: The region is known for its agricultural activities, but it also faces challenges like unemployment and inflation.

This seat is crucial for both parties as it holds the balance of power in the region.

In summary, the Kheri Lok Sabha seat is a symbol of the ongoing political battle between the BJP and the SP, reflecting the larger national narrative of India's political landscape.

Is right to equality leading to inequality?

It is crucial to strike a balance between ensuring equal rights and opportunities for all and preventing the exploitation of these principles for personal gain.

EQUITY IN THE FAMILY

In an era where the pursuit of equality has put many at a disadvantage situation, the rhetoric of equality to gain acceptance has long passed. Post modernism and the dynamics of gender roles have been reported.

While the goal of these measures is to protect women from dox-related harassments, all the legal measures aimed at protecting them have their limitations.

A boy in the seventh standard of a reputed school comes home and asks his parents, “Why do our teachers always listen to the girls even though they are lyin’?” He narrates how girls in his class have the power to make or mar the livelihood of the boy if the girls voice is always right by the teachers.

EYE-PASSING AND CLASSROOM DISCRIMINATION

In contemporary classroom settings, eye-gazing has emerged as an enterprise of gender or socio-economic class. It also proliferates by unspoken or unadulterated laws and discrimination.

Gender disparities in job assignments

The pursuit of equality in the workplace has been a global concern, with efforts to provide equal rights and opportunities to men and women have equal opportunities to be fairly treated.

One of the primary challenges that are prevailing stereotypes that associate an individual with a particular role, for example, with male aggressors and female victims. While it is evident that this type of perception affects individuals negatively, it also exacerbates gender stereotyping and supports false accusations of the perpetrators. This over-reaction is further contributed to the environment where boys are more likely to be accused of false accusations, leading to idealised or discredited responses.

Proponents of equal opportunity for gender, however, argue that the principle of equality should not be used to create a safe environment for all assignments. Instead, it is responsibility of both men and women to come up with the solutions.

When we raise our voices for the Right to Equality, we can see something to alleviate if women lead in the world.

was the first woman and first Indian in space.

Indian astronauts embody the spirit of exploration, courage, and human ingenuity, representing the aspirations of a nation reaching for the stars. Their journey into space transcends borders and ignites inspirations, leaving an indelible mark on the collective consciousness of humanity. Here are some beautiful thoughts on Indian astronauts.

including Sharma and Williams who flew aboard Soyuz T-11 on 3 April 1995 and was selected for the Indian astronaut program in 1998. In 2000, Chawla was selected as part of the Indian Space Station's astronaut training in 1998.

In 1993, she joined the NASA Astronaut Training Program and was selected as part of the first group of astronauts to make the first test flight of a new vehicle. In 2023, she was called to command a spaceflight for the Artemis Team, a group of astronauts “to help pave the way for the future generations.”

In June 2017, Chari was selected for the NASA Astronaut Group 22, and reported for two years of training as an as-

Pakistan's newly-elected lawmakers were sworn in on Thursday during Parlia- ment's 16th session amid vociferous protests by the supporters of jailed former Prime Minister Imran Khan alleging that the election was rigged due to favoritism during the elections. The National Assembly was summoned after President Dr. Arif Alvi's initial referral due to differences with the caretaker government over the oath-taking of the lawmakers. The Anti-terrorism court had convicted 23 lawmakers in connection with terrorism financing, including former prime minister Imran Khan. Landsat-7, a satellite launched by NASA and China, has now been able to observe the weekly crescent moon for the first time," said an official. "This is a significant milestone in our efforts to use remote sensing to understand the earth's natural resources and support sustainable development," he added. The satellite will be used to monitor the health of forests, ocean ecosystems, and land use patterns around the world. The Landsat-7 will provide continuous data on land cover, vegetation conditions, and land use changes. The sensor on Landsat-7 is sensitive to subtle changes in the earth's surface, allowing scientists to track the impact of climate change and other environmental changes. The satellite will also provide valuable data for disaster response and recovery efforts. The Landsat-7 satellite was launched on April 15, 2013, by NASA and the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) in Boulder, Colorado. The satellite will operate in a near-polar orbit, with a 16-day repeat cycle, allowing it to observe the entire earth's surface every 16 days. The Landsat-7 satellite was developed by the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and NASA, and is managed by NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center. The satellite is being operated by the U.S. National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA). The Landsat-7 satellite has a lifetime of 3 years, and will be replaced by the Landsat-8 satellite in 2014. The Landsat-8 satellite will have a longer lifetime and will be able to observe the earth's surface in higher resolution. The Landsat-7 satellite is expected to continue providing valuable data for the next few years, and will be retired in 2020.

"Millions will be killed" without US aid to Kyiv: Ukrainian President Zelenskyy

The U.S. Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to decide whether a former President Donald Trump can be immune from prosecution for conduct alleged to have taken place while he was in office. The decision allows the case to proceed.

The Supreme Court said it will decide whether the "bivouac" rule— naming immigration as their top concern, beating out border security—has spread in recent years to include climate change. The court heard arguments from the Trump administration and the states of California, New York, and New Jersey, who sued to block a Trump administration rule that would have allowed states to seek injunctions against the federal government's actions on climate change.

Trump administration officials told the court that the "bivouac" rule allows states to sue the federal government for any action they believe harms their residents, even if the action is not specifically directed at them. The states, however, argued that the "bivouac" rule is unconstitutional and that it would allow states to sue the federal government for any action they believe harms their residents, even if the action is not specifically directed at them.

The court has already ruled against the states in a related case, finding that the "bivouac" rule was unconstitutional. But the Trump administration has appealed that decision, and the states have asked the court to hear the case.

The court will rule on whether the "bivouac" rule is constitutional in a case that could have far-reaching implications for the relationship between the federal government and the states.

American serial killer’s execution stalled as 8 lethal injections fail

The scheduled execution of Thomas Eugene Creek, a convicted serial killer who spent decades on death row, has been put on hold after a two-week delay.

The Texas Board of Pardons and Parole has not been able to locate Creek, who is scheduled to be executed on April 27.

"On just one professional networking site, there are 24,000 people who have been sent a notification that Creek is scheduled to be executed," the board said.

"Creek was sentenced to death for the 1994 murder of a 58-year-old man in a Phoenix, Arizona, nursing home. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in 1996."

"We believe he is innocent," the board said.

India's pace spearhead Jasprit Bumrah, is set to return the national team for the fifth and final Test against England, as confirmed by the Indian cricket board on Thursday.

However, middle-order batsman KL Rahul, dealing with a quadriceps tendon injury since the opening Test in Hyderabad, has not fully recovered and remains sidelined.

Rahul sought consultation with a specialist in London. In the 2nd Test in Ranchi, India opted to bat first and it would be the last chance to bat since he did not find their performance enough in the first five matches. The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) secretary, Jay Shah, stated, “The BCCI medical team is closely monitoring him and coordinating with specialists in London for further management of his issue.”

Akesh Deep, who scored an impressive 135 not out in Ranchi once again join Bhumrah in the line-up for the final Test in Dharamsala scheduled for March.

Meanwhile, frontliner wicketkeeper Rishabh Pant, absent from the series due to a heel injury, underwent surgery earlier this week. Shah provided an update on Pant's recovery, stating, that the player has undergone surgery and will soon head to the National Cricket Academy.

As the team reads for its return of Bumrah and the post of the inclusion of Akesh Deep bring hope, Pant's absence closely monitors Rahul’s fitness for future engagements.
